

BMO Tactical Global Growth ETF Fund

Core Tactical/Strategic Portfolio Outlook/Adjustments

We did not make any trades last week. We are positioned in maximum defensive positioning as we expect the recessionary phase of the business cycle to play out in the coming quarters. Jamie Dimon said last week that it's a virtual certainty, but the timing may be pushed back a bit. It seems higher for longer and restrictive financial conditions is the playbook despite the fact that the market still see considerable easing and a soft landing. Hard to believe the fastest tightening cycle in decades ends in anything but a recession.

Macro Market Strategy

We think this is a very two-way market for the next few quarters with a bearish tilt. QT should start to weigh on risk premiums going forward, but there is massive cash balances sitting in the RRP to offset a significant impact. The FOMC's more aggressive path (higher for longer) is not facing some systemic risks as the rapid rate hikes that have impacted bank balance sheets have tightened financial conditions. The FOMC message this week will be critical. We expect a 25 bps rate hike and a commitment to fight inflation while recognizing the tighter financial conditions they are seeing in banking. Would be hard to go from a near certainty of 50 bps pre SIVB to no rate hike. The market based pricing has a 60% odds of a 25 bps rate hike. Seems too low to be a credible inflation fighter.

Chart of the Week

PRO-EYES Indicators

Risk Level

Low-Med

The core portfolio beta is 84.6%. The degree of delta protection is -55% while the value of beta protection is 5%. The weighted average cap is: 4400. The weighted average collar is: 4100. The weighted average floor is: 0.

The tactical PRO-EYES factor suggests that while some caution is still warranted on business cycle and valuation and that we are likely in a bear market cycle, the tactical component suggests lots of two-way opportunity is likely. The February and March weakness has moved the tactical component to oversold levels.
